Agency and Communion in Social Psychology

Edited by Andrea Abele and Bogdan Wojciszke

Series: Current Issues in Social Psychology

Agency and Communion in Social Psychology examines the different perspectives of the agency-communion framework in relation to evolutionary psychology, social cognition, and applied contexts. It describes the historical roots of the theories relevant to the framework from a broad range of fields including the self, personality, motivation, stereotyping, power, gender, etc. The book analyses the stereotype content model, and suggests the agency-communion framework cannot only be understood in relation to this concept but that it is linked to general developments in psychology. This is essential reading for students and academics in social psychology interested in this topic.
